Recruiter JMA Network says, 'September was just the job!'

7 October, 2010 - 11:22

Strengthening demand for new jobs in the comms sector isn't letting up according to recruiter JMA Network, which after a summer scorcher in telecoms recruitment saw no slow down in interviews and placements during September.

Patrick Judges, Resourcing Director at JMA Network, announced another 'bumper sales month'. "Even after a surprisingly busy August, September was our best month of the year," he said. "There is strong demand for data-centric professionals in all departments, matched by high candidate activity across the sector.

"While the general economic outlook may still be cautious, the telecoms sector is clearly implementing positive staffing plans. Of particular note is the increase in management and executive level opportunities that we are securing, suggesting that clients are looking to make bold changes in 2011."
